

Edward Said National Conservatory of Music

Volunteering with Edward Said National Conservatory of Music

The Edward Said National Conservatory of Music is looking for competent and passionate volunteers to teach piano and violin for the children and youth at the conservatory. The impact on the students and their ability to fulfil their musical aspirations as well as the conservatory's ability to meet its professional duty is profound. Therefore, we wish to invite talented musicians from Denmark to bring new notes and inspiration to the Conservatory.

The Edward Said National Conservatory of Music Established in 1993, the Conservatory works in music education and promotion. Through its music education and projects, it has positioned itself as a leading institution in music and performing arts scene in Palestine and has advanced music appreciation and interest within the public and official spheres. It has developed a channelling process for aspiring musicians, and further democratized music practice and training while making it more professional.

Our Vision: The dissemination of a lively and creative musical culture in every home that would contribute towards the consolidation of Palestinian identity and the education of future generations.

Located in Ramallah, Palestine

Current available volunteer positions

Teacher for violin or piano

- Conservatory or University degrees in their discipline
- Teaching experience and understanding of both individual and group pedagogy
- Motivated, creative, adaptable, comfortable in group or individual setting
- Organized, with proven ability to manage a full teaching programme
- Passionate about bringing musical awareness to a community, developing a love of music and enjoyment of playing, inspiring young people
- Ability to coach orchestra sections and lead workshops